i grew up

i know myself better

I'm focusing more on happiness rather than a rigid path in life.

More mature, came out of the closet, way smarter

im that guy

I have somewhat figured the type of person that I want to be. I understand my personality, and the best ways in which to help others

stronger and with more growth

I feel like before I was in high school I lived in a bubble where I ignored most of the world. Now although living in that bubble would probably make me happier, as you know ignorance is bliss, I know that I need to move out of it to live a full life.

I'm more understanding of other peoples backgrounds/ prior circumstances that make them the person that they are

I have more knowledge

More thoughtful and have better understanding of other peoples perspective

more cognizant of problems in the world

i speak up for myself more, know my self worth, love who i am and i'm comfortable in my skin

More self aware and self confident about who I am, what I need, and what I want

Conflicts I've overcome, people ive worked with, compassion ive witnesses

pretty much all of them

Can communicate better and a nicer person

Taught me resilience

I'm every way. It's hard to not grow mentally throughout these four years.

Im not a freshman anymore (freshman are worse people)

I feel more confident about myself than before

Kinder, more patient, less self-important/arrogant

Not relevant bc it wasn't due to the school/staff here or any students

Maturity

Maturity & social aptitude

I learned a lot more about a lot of different cultures and I grew a lot in confidence and joy.

Just overall

Jaivon

Yes because I'm high school I have done a lot of reflection and it has allowed major growth. I have better communication and time management skills. I now know how to network and articulate my feelings and concerns.

I've become a lot able to ask for help and advocate for myself.

I understand myself better, and have learned more about what I am looking for in life (I no longer perform for others validation)

Matured on my own, no thanks to pio

More engaged

I know myself more, and in tandem with that I know others more. I think my empathy has grown

I'm less annoying

I have a more open mindset and am more empathetic

Worrying about my own happiness

I have befriended people of different cultures and ethnicities and grew and understand and appreciation for them.

Going through certain experiences only high school has to offer, I've learned a lot. I feel like I have gained new knowledge beyond academics that will benefit me later in life.

i have had the chance to meet and interact with many different people and i have learned a lot about others

I have been able to discover more about myself these past couple years, and looking back I am very happy with the person I have become.

I believe I'm more aware about who I am. And how I affect other people

I think i've been able to line my priorities better. I spent my years of highschool in two extremes- academic success and going off the deep end some into drugs and partying. I know can say I walk a balanced line and am in control on either side.

more positive and more outspoken

I am feeling motivated and more secure in my academic abilities and perserverance.

I left being better at being patient and working with other people.

I am more self aware of my struggles and my needs. I've learned to start to forgive people who have hurt me in the past, I'm not condoning their actions but forgiving myself too and releasing the ball and chain I have on grudges. I've learned to accept failure and relapses. Although I'm not all the way there yet I made those crucial first steps.

I'm more mature, and I have a better sense of how to treat people/ how I want to be treated

Because I'm not a freshman anymore.

I have more empathy for people

More mature and understanding of others.

I know myself better

I have become a better leader and more understanding of peoples ideals and emotions.

I have grown in knowledge and made some new friends

I have learned how to work hard and study. I've also met a lot of people that have made my life more interesting and enjoyable.

I've met lots of different people and seen many people in many different situations, and therefore seen people do bad things and i've learned from their mistakes

I know a lot more about who I am and what I want to do, also I have learned a lot more about the world outside of myself

More open to talking to people and more confidant in myself

I fake smile more now :)

I've discovered myself more than I thought I would. I'm walking out of Pioneer with no fucks to give about what people say about me or think about me.

I am more fully realized as myself.

I like myself more

I'm hoping I've matured a lot from the past four years

Pioneer has made me more aware of my surroundings and has taught me how to build connections

I've learned to value high-quality friendships and how to better myself not only academically, or athletically, but emotionally as a person. Over my three years at Pioneer, I grew so incredibly much. This school jump started my journey to self discovery.

I know not to be a bitch like other kids are

I've just grown a lot as a person overall. I've learned more about myself

I was pretty immature, unathletic and relatively unhealthy and pretty lazy and I've basically fixed all those things to varying degrees

Im not annoying or rude about religion and i'm happy to be a better person in my own way. im not cringe anymore and i'm proud to be able to say i am leaving pioneer with a heightened sense of maturity

I've matured a lot since freshman year and I've learned about myself and others so much

I learned about the power of being kind, inclusive, open-minded, and positive.

I am more organized, motivated, I know who I am and what I want and I believe in myself

More caring and confident

less insecure

Many of the communities I've become a part of at Pioneer and the people I've meet have really pushed me out of my comfort zone to be a leader and impactful person in my community.

I have a more worldly view

I'm more educated on society and I'm a better person leaving than I was going in.

Better understanding of life's hardships

i know what i want and how to stand up for myself.

More confident and sociable!

I've had so many more experiences that have changed how I think and react to situations, and all of the mistakes that I made throughout HS have helped me with my approach to life and interactions with others.

I understand things better and I feel like I've grown and I feel like I can understand my feelings and help to deal with them more. Although I feel like I could have slight depression

I am more confident. I am happier with myself, and I understand myself better. I am able to do what is best for me.

empathy

i'm hot asf

I have grown a lot since middle school

I definitely work better with difficult people than I did before. I also have learned so much about myself during this time.

Im more in touch with my emotions

Now I know what I want to change about the public school system and what I want to keep

Therapy

I have grown as a leader and realize I don't like managing people. feels like herding cats, I genuinely hate trying to get other people to cooperate.

just built different im super sexy and funny so, duh.

Less pedantic.

I know myself better. I'm more aware of myself and the people around me, more driven, more confident, and I'm more determined to make a tangible difference in the world around me.

A nicer person

I'm more emotionally intelligent.

I am not as judgmental. This especially changed during senior year. I also am just overall more mature.

I have met so many new people through classes and sports, and I have learned a lot about leadership and pushing myself to do the best I can from coaches and teachers.

I'm a better person in terms of patience, and listening to others, and learning to ask for help for others and myself.
